Do Beliefs Matter?

Lesson for October 7, 1962

Some beliefs matter, some don't. What two historians think about an obscure Assyrian general about 2,000 years before Christ, makes mighty little difference really, even if they fought a duel over it. Nobody likes to be disagreed with; but those who have listened to family quarrels will testify that the quarrel is often over something very trifling. The one who is "right" could much better keep his (or her) mouth shut and let the other one think what he or she pleases; the truth in this argument may be so unimportant that it could be proved twice over and still make no difference.

Some beliefs do matter

All the same, some beliefs do matter. By "belief" we mean (for the moment) believing that something or other is true. By "matter" we mean make some important difference to some body, either the believer himself or other persons. Still even this is not exactly definite. What does "important difference" mean? What is a "difference" and when does it begin to be important? This can perhaps be illustrated. Take the sentence: God is love. Suppse you woke up woke up some morning and found that this sentence is not true? Suppose you had always believed it was true and now discovered you were wrong? It would mean that it no longer made sense for you to try to love your neighbor or to love any one. If God is love, then human love is (so to speak) going with the current of the universe, it is being in harmony with God the Creator. If God is not love, then human love works against the universe, and must eventually be crushed by it. Henceforth it would be more god-like to live a life controlled by hate. So it does make all the difference in the world not only whether you believe in God but what kind of God you believe in.

"Saving faith"

More about that next week. For now, the point is that some beliefs do matter, a great deal. The kind of belief which is vitally important is called "saving" faith. By this is meant faith that sets the believer over on the side of God, and not on the side against Him. God as a friend or God as an enemy, which? The question answers itself. God as a friend or God as a stranger? There's no argument as to which any sane person would prefer.

But there is one meaning of "belief" we have not mentioned yet. That is, believing in some one. This is the kind of belief that is closely kin to trust, confidence, reliance, commitment. I may believe about a certain bus that it is going to St. Louis and that the ticket I have in my pocket is good for the trip. I may believe any number of true facts about that bus but not all that believing is going to move me an inch nearer where I want to go. I have to trust myself to the bus, get on, take a seat and relax. That is believing in the bus.

So I may believe many true things about God, but unless I believe in God enough to trust myself to Him, I have not taken the step that sets me actually on the side of God, I have not yet had saving faith.

Results

Some of the results of faith that matters, or saving faith, cannot be observed by outsiders, not even by intimate friends. What you feel like deep down inside is something in and for yourself alone. But the Christian religion does not operate with invisible virtues and shadowy jobs. People sometimes ask: So and so made a profession of faith long ago, but still he is one of the meanest men in town. It looks like not even belief in God makes much difference to him. Is this saving faith? The answer, of course, is that in such a case the profession of faith was only that - a profession, a matter of words. A man can say he believes, or even think he believes, without really doing so. Really and truly to believe in the true God as Christ has shown Him to us, is bound to make a difference in the way we live, and not only in the way we think.

Appomattox High School News

This past week found both students and teachers unusually busy as they began the week during which the annual Sequential Tests of Educational Progress, School and College Ability Tests, and Differential Aptitude Tests were given. STEP and SCAT are administered to the ninth and eleventh grades while the DAT is taken by the eighth grade.

College officials and business men are very much interested in scores from these tests. Both groups desire to know whether a student has done his best work on them. The attitude a student has taken toward a test may be the one he has toward all work; therefore colleges and business men are wary of students who haven't woked to their capacity

The F. B. L. A. Club held its organizational meeting on Thursday, September 27, 1962.

President Eleanor Hanson explained the club's purposes and projects to the new members.

The members agreed to sell subscriptions to the school newspaper.

The officers for the coming year are: President - Eleanor Hanson, Vice President — Phyllis Mayberry; Secretary —Joan Crowder; Treasurer — Patricia Wells; Historian — Doris Bass; Parliamentarian — Sue Gilbert; Reporter — Sue Giles.

The Appomattox High School Jayvee Football team, playing their first game of the season was upended by Rustburg High School 14-7, with the winning touchdown coming in the last 14 seconds.

The unbeaten Red Devils roared into the lead early in the second quarter on a sustained drive of 45 yards. Charles Falwell, the 175 pound star fullback climaxed the drive going over left tackle from 10 yards out. The extra point was good as quarterback, Eagle, flipped out to Falwell and the big, fullback scampered into the end zone.

The "Baby Rebels" came roaring back a few moments later as Jimmy Burke brought in a Rustburg punt on his own 20 yard line behind beautiful blocking galloped 80 yards for the score. Charles Martin and Ronnie Williams threw key blocks to let him thru. Fullback Jack Hamilton gave the Rebels their seventh point as he scampered around end into paydirt.

The second half was mainly teams. Rustburg threatened late in the third quarter but with a first down and goal to go on the four yard line the determined Confederates pulled themselves together and fought off the charging Red men.

With just a few moments left in the game the Red Devils recovered a fumble on the Rebels 40 yard line and with Falwell leading the way marched toward the Rebel goal line with 14 seconds left in the contest, Falwell busted over right tackle and fell into the end zone for the winning touchdown. Falwell iced the cake as he scampered around right end for the 14th and final point.

The line play of both teams was furious and there were many standouts on the Rebels defensive team, Some of these were Williams, Mcginson, O'Brien, Stanley, Buchanan and the Mitchell twins, Doug and Mike,
